

made for you by
Amity

Affordable and Flexible Learning!

Amity
e-learning hub
digital training offer
2024

Hello, we are Kate and Emily the co-founders of Amity.

Over the last 4 years we have supported thousands of front line practitioners with our bespoke virtual and face to face training and resources.

We are excited to offer a new flexible approach to your workforce learning via our digital learning hub.

Flexible, affordable training including a digital resource - contact us for prices.

We can even create a bespoke module for you,
get in touch to find out more.

Learning modules made by the relationship Amity experts that are engaging

You can say goodbye to boring 'click next' e-learning or a training session that requires you to attend in person, park your car, arrive flustered and sit still for half a day.

E-learning represents a fully flexible approach with significant cost savings when compared to face-to-face delivery, with the added benefit that it can be completed at a time convenient to the user.

Amity e-learning has been designed to be interactive and engaging. You can complete Amity e-learning anytime using a laptop, desktop or even your mobile phone. It is web-based meaning that it can be accessed by anyone, at any time regardless of their organisation.

All our modules are mixed multi-media based and learner knowledge is tested via a quiz. Each module comes with a practical Amity resource to download and use in practice.

Amity learning modules have been designed using the benefits of virtual learning so that participants are motivated from start to finish.

Each course has a downloadable resource and digital completion certificate.

Prices and Packages

All Amity Learning courses are competitively priced based on leading e-learning market comparisons.

In addition to the training, each course/module includes an Amity downloadable practitioner resource. Contact us for prices

The Amity Learning Hub: Current modules and modules in development

Current modules available

- The Relationship Toolkit *
- Me in the Middle - a voice of the child learning module and downloadable resource for practitioners to understand how a child or young people are affected by the relationships around them
- Recognising the difference between domestic abuse and parental conflict
- Family Communication - a resource for schools and community settings

Modules in development

- Understanding and responding to child to parent violence and abuse
- Strategies for supporting victims of coercive control in the UK
- Understanding the warning signs: How to prevent children from joining gangs UK
- Understanding Autism and ADHD: A guide to supporting parents.
- The first time Dad: Navigating the early years of fatherhood

The Relationship Toolkit is a licensed resource and will require an additional fee if it is not already used by your organisation.*

Amity Learning Hub:

Feedback from Professionals

“I really enjoyed it and found Kate very interesting to listen to. She delivered it in a really interesting and clear manner. I like listening to podcasts and have adapted to that type of learning, she was fab. I could have listened to the whole course delivered by her. Hope you don’t mind me telling you and thanks”

Early Help Family Link Practitioner, Bury Council

“I have just completed the training and it’s something special, such a brilliant effort”

Locality Manager RPC Lead, Bury Council

“We don’t have the capacity to train everyone, the Amity Learning Hub gives us the flexibility to train the multi-agency workforce at pace and time that suits them. It is a cost saving for us now because we don’t have the funding to have a dedicated training person anymore. This is the ideal way to train hundreds of people without having to organise it”.

RPC Lead, The Midlands

Me in the Middle

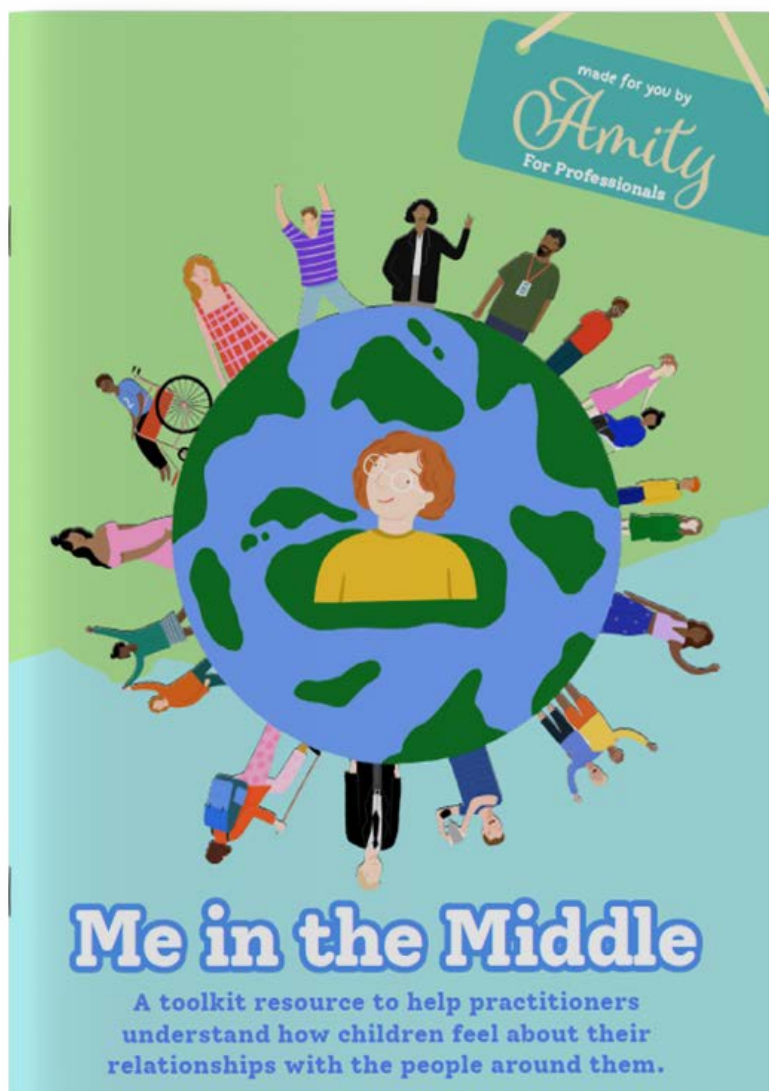

A child-centred approach to help understand how children and young people feel about their relationships with the people around them

Module overview

The child's voice and the voice of the child are common phrases used to describe the 'active' involvement of children and young people by practitioners. Me in Middle has been co-produced by Amity with practitioners from Children's Services to help understand the impact of relationships at home, school, and in the community.

Upon completion, practitioners will take away a practical 70-page Toolkit that covers: key themes from SPRs, legislation, safeguarding, managing disclosure, barriers to disclosure, key questions to ask young people about their lived experience and the impact it has, family relationships and well-being.

The Toolkit includes a range of conversation-provoking illustrated tools to use with children and young people in everyday practice.

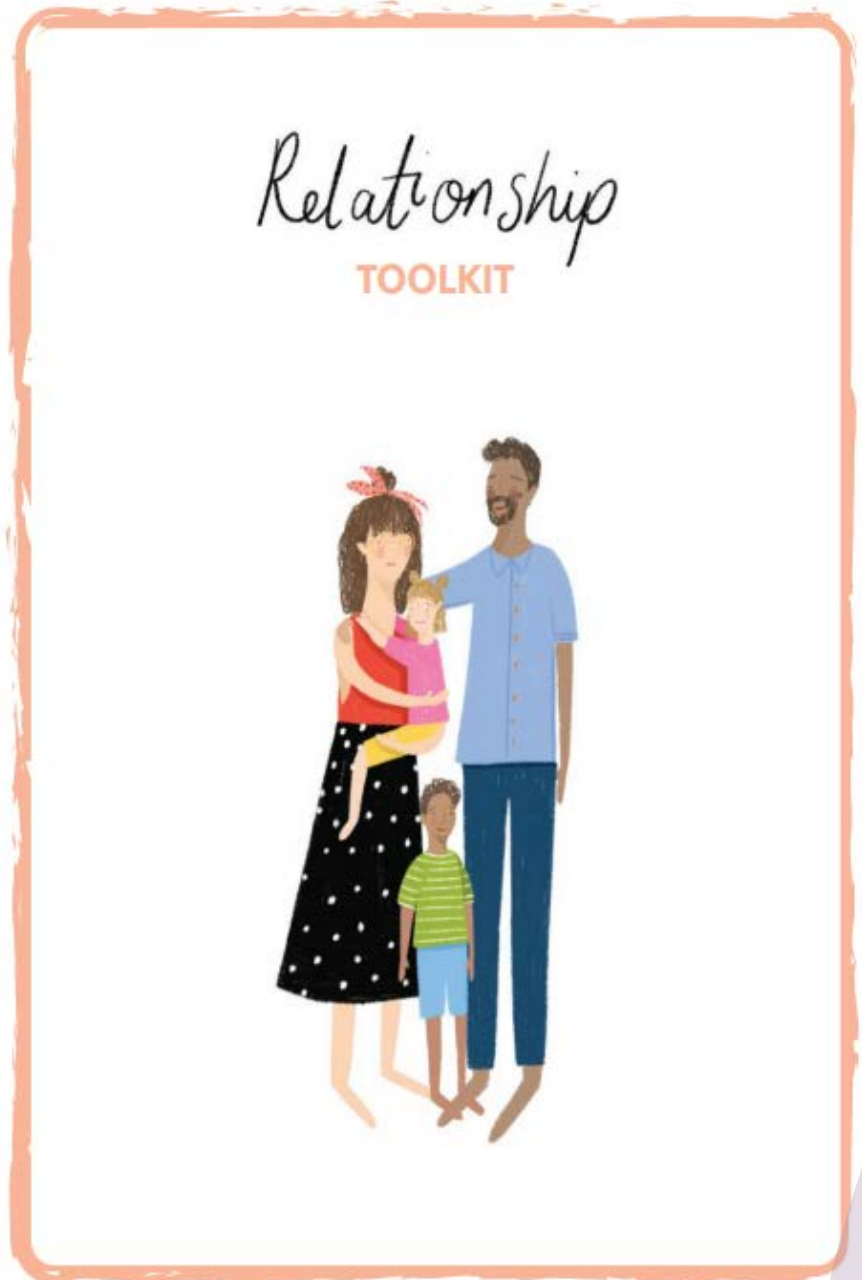

The Relationship Toolkit (parental conflict)

Module overview

By the end of the session participants will understand parental conflict and what the research says about its impact family functioning and outcomes for both adults and children.

Recognise that there is a difference between domestic abuse and parental conflict. Feel more confident about 'couple relationship quality enquiry' in their everyday practice.

Participants will become familiar with the with Amity Relationship Toolkit and its contents. Will understand the variety of tools, pre and post-programme self-assessment questionnaire and how to use this within the context of parental conflict support. Confidently assess, plan, implement and review parental conflict support with couples and/or individuals.

This module is also fully compatible with the Greater Manchester Parental Conflict Toolkit

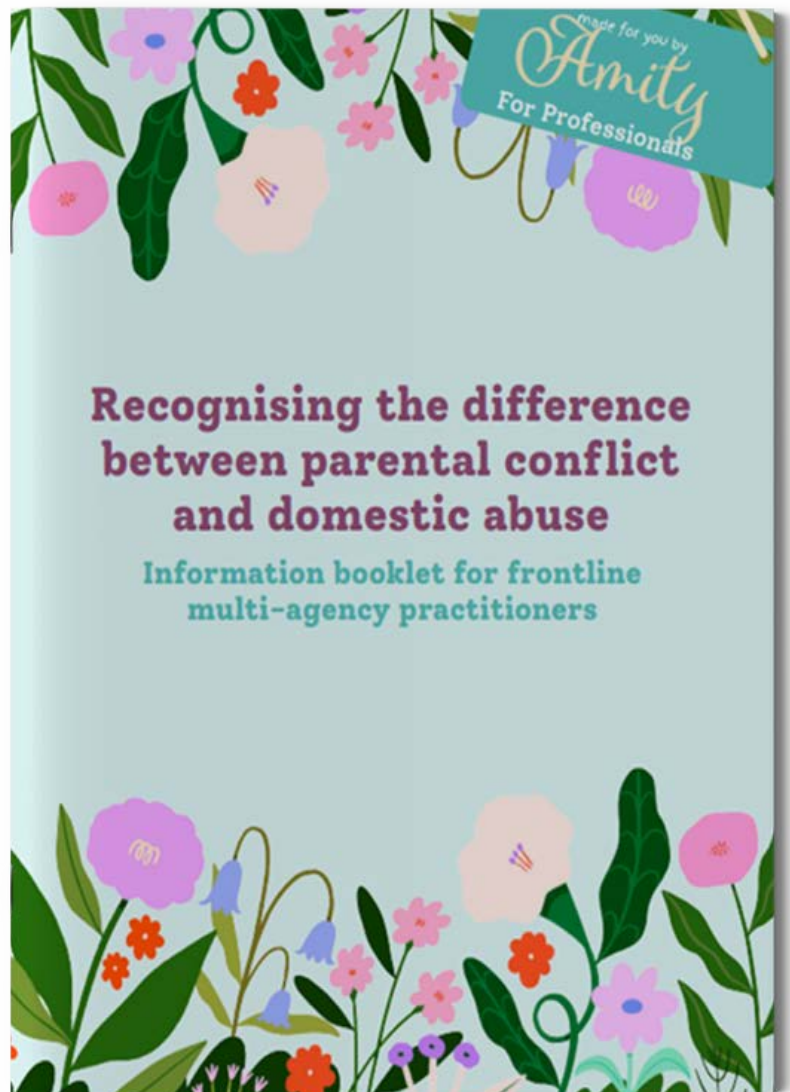

Recognising the difference between domestic abuse

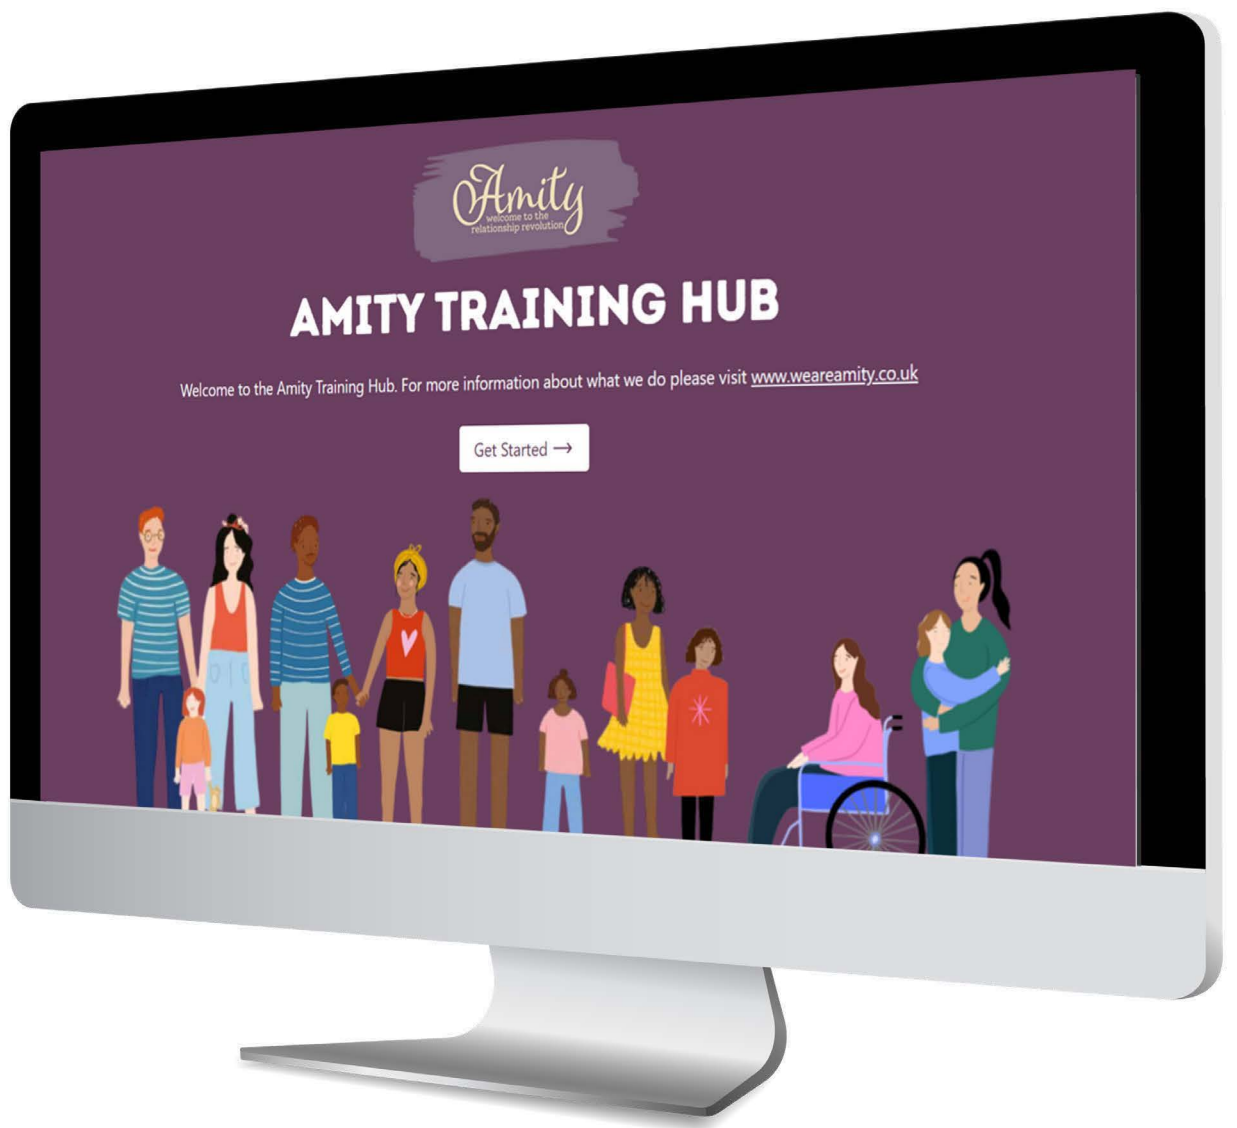

Module overview

This extremely popular module is designed for any multi-agency practitioner working with children, adults or families. It's been created in response to questions raised by the wider workforce who are keen to recognise the difference between parental conflict and domestic abuse.

The session explores the language used to describe parental conflict and domestic abuse, understanding coercive control, the critical difference between the two concerns and why sometimes there are behaviour overlaps. We work through the confusion this can cause and what do if a practitioner is concerned about either.

On completion, learners can download the practical booklet that accompanies this session.

made for you by
Amity

The Amity Web-based e-learning Hub

for multi-agency practitioners